We never understood what grown-ups said about someone we'd never see again what does it mean to say that someone is dead? As day by day we face the future by faith. For we walk by faith not by sight :) The death of a loved one stirs us to the core. We'd gladly give our life in fair exchange for a lover, a friend or kin that's in harm's way. What's in our hearts feels both real and unreal, except when we're too numb to even feel? Love's not based on gifts, or gold, or gain. Love does more than share; it gives in joy and pain. But I know our love is such we've met before and shall meet again-again, and forever more!
