Dear Big Bro!

I decided to write you today, since Rick departed 2 years ago and you'll be joining him soon; I wanted to let you both know that I really don't appreciate you guys leaving me here alone. I wanted to tell you that despite all your issues and the way life turned out for you I could not have asked for a better big brother. Whenever I needed something repaired, an oil change or a quick favor I knew I could call upon you. I'm not sure if I ever told you this but when we were in high school, I was so proud of you when you were playing football, it would absolutely thrill me to tell people "that's my big brother out there!" I also clearly remember a time in a corridor of Hubbard Junior High School, I had let this mouth of mine get me into trouble. I was just about to get what was coming to me when out of nowhere you swooped down and saved me from what surely would have been a very unpleasant situation! I remember that day so well. Tell me bro, who could forget that oh so endearing story of when you dressed me in a snowsuit in New Jersey, the only problem with that was it was in JULY! You were charged to watch me that day and you wanted to go outside, your only option was to take me with you and that's exactly what you did! I hope you know that putting you at peace today was hard for me, just as it was hard for me to do for Rick. You held my hand and walked me through that assuring me it would be best for him. When I spoke with the neurosurgeon earlier I was advised yet again there was nothing medically that could be done for you, My sincerest hope now is that you know if there was any way or anything I could have done to save you I would have. I immediately recalled the conversation we had 2 years ago, I knew I could no longer allow you to be in that state and as difficult as it was for me, I knew being in that state was even harder for you. Suddenly it was clear what I needed to do. I hope all good things for you now and that you find and have whatever you need because you so richly deserve it. I will always keep you close to my heart, you can finally put it down and rest yourself. I love you Bro, say hello to Rick for me!
