Obituary

Arthur Henry Simmons was born in New York, New York on July 29, 1945 to Alonzo Simmons and Ophelia Simmons. Arthur was a true Harlemit, he loved Harlem and lived in Harlem all of his life. He also attended school in Harlem.

Arthur was known for his love of basketball. He played basketball in junior high, high school and as long as he could. He was also known as an excellent cook. He worked as a chef for many years. However, Arthur will always be known for being a fun loving person, with never a dull day and always on the go. In fact, his favorite song perfectly described him, "Ain't No Stoppin' Us Now". Arthur loved parties, boat rides, music and people. He was loved by all and hated by none, because he enjoyed life and wanted everyone around him to enjoy life as well. If you were down you would hear him say, "knock it off, let's enjoy ourselves."

Arthur was the dad of all dads. I am lucky to have had a father like him. Whether I was wrong or right he was always there for me. I wouldn't trade him for the world. He pushed me to be successful and well accomplished in life. I could only hope, wish and strive very hard to be that kind of dad to my own children. The last thing he told me is, "I got your back". He always had my back, now I have his.

Arthur leaves to cherish his memory: his one and only son, Arthur, Jr.; his daughter-in-law, Asmaou Bah; his grandchildren, Justin "Pop", Hezekiah, Kahmel, Kah-La, Jay-La, Lay-La, Messiah, Pharoah, Zyair and Phoenix; his woo, Joyce; niece, Melissa and her children; nephews, Alty and Colie; goddaughters, Michelle and Leticia "Monkey Monk"; cousin, Tammy; and a host of nieces, nephews, other family and friends.
