Obituary

JACQUELINE WILSON was born on May 13, 1960 in East Harlem, New York. She was the fourth born child of Jake and Jennie Wilson.

Jacqueline was educated at P.S. 57 Elementary School, I.S. 117 and later Washington Irving High School. She was raised in Harlem and loved her neighborhood. Gifted with a great and magnetic personality, Jacqueline was exceptionally social and active. She loved her friends and her neighborhood. While moving about she would be greeted everywhere as Ms. Jackie and more affectionately as “Jack” by her close friends.

Jacqueline worked for the Office for People with Developmental Disabilities nearly 20 years before retiring. Thereafter, she continued to work as a caregiver to the elderly and disabled. She referred to the clients she serviced as “her girls” or “her guys”.

Jacqueline gave birth to her first son and named him Cherokee; twenty-two months later she gave birth to her second son named Cheyenne. More than just her sons, they would do anything for her and accompany her everywhere up onto her last day. She loved her kids as well as kids of friends and strangers alike. Jacqueline’s youthful energy gave her countless experiences with an assortment of people.

She loved cooking and was known to make a mouthwatering Spanish rice and Pineapple Upside Down Cake. Feeding people was natural for her. Jacqueline loved playing cards, singing, dancing, talking and laughing and of course, taking pictures. If you truly knew her, you knew she was bold, unapologetic and never hesitated to let you know how she felt. She was a full person and truly lived life.

Her mother, Jennie Wilson, father, Jake Wilson, sister, Pat Wilson and nephew, Hakim Wilson preceded Jacqueline. She is survived by her sons, Cherokee Graham and Cheyenne Graham; her sisters, Janet Wilson and Iris Dawson; nephew, William Edmonds and Kai Borden; and niece, Jazmine Harper.
