What we didn't get to say...

Dad, time flew and you slipped away, with much on our hearts that we didn't get to say.

As young boys you invested in us, instilled trust and respect was a must.

Time skipped, zero to ten, from boys to men – reminiscing how you were then.

Now you leave with us to grieve, so many memories we have yet to conceive.

Circumstances ruled and controlled our minds and now we have run out of time.

Today we can't have it our way, we love you dad, is what we didn't get to say.

"Big Brother"

The oldest child, tough was your style;
you set the example with each and every mile.
Soft and gentle, that was your heart, but a sharp tone to those,
who didn't know them apart.

You were the one, who carried it all;
it was done right or not done at all.

As a sea scout is where you started out,
then the drill team is what you were about.

Misunderstood and that was ok,
you knew the block way back in the day.

When Timmy was bullied you showed up with some risk,
taught him how to fight by using his fist.

When Travis came home about the boy down the street,
you took him back and taught him how to defeat!

Swayed mommy and daddy with words that were true,
and would tell them both;
what NOT to let us do...

Right from wrong, you took the lead,
and for every encounter you held the deed.
We'll only get one, and you were like no other,
thank you for leading... as our big brother.
