Obituary

Doris Ann Perry, daughter of the late George Frank Green, Jr. and Dorothy Perry Yarborough was born on May 7, 1959 in Louisburg, North Carolina. She departed this life on April 9, 2021.

Doris Perry graduated from Harlem Preparatory High School and attended her dream college The City College of New York. She majored in education. Doris Perry always knew she wanted to be a teacher. However, her career and impact expanded far beyond that. She was a modern renaissance woman who positively impacted the lives of all she had a relationship with. Her professional experience expanded across the education, hospitality, housekeeping, caretaker, social services, criminal justice, and medical fields.

Doris was a loving daughter, mother, sister, aunt, niece, cousin, friend, and person. She loved helping others, especially children. She found joy in teaching and even after retiring from the education field she still had an interest in educating the youth. Doris will truly be missed and forever loved. She is gone but will never be forgotten.

Doris leaves to cherish her memories: mother, Dorothy P. Yarborough; daughter, Annisia E.C. Perry; godchildren, Odell Smith, Tomika King-Glover (Eric Glover), and Anthony Stewart; furry grandson, Mister Purr Perry; sisters, Jacqueline Walton (Gary Walton), Deeanna Harris (Orlando Harris), and Jacqueline Green; brother, Laquain Perry; and a host of family and friends.
