Obituary

Robert Salzman was born on November 4, 1959 in New York City. He was a true New Yorker, who attended New York public school and loved the city enormously.

He enjoyed working out and boxing. In July 2003, he won the YMCA power lifting competition, picking up 505 pounds. He loved his job working as security in the top New York clubs and restaurants. He took the role of security seriously, both on and off the job, and protected everyone he came across. In true New York fashion, he landed a role in the movie Gun Hill Road, being discovered by the director while riding the D train to the Bronx. The movie premiered at the Sundance Film Festival. The director enjoyed getting to know Rob, because of his charisma and big presence and had planned to make Rob's life story into a movie. Rob enjoyed making people laugh with his great storytelling abilities. In his free time, Rob enjoyed listening to music and spending time with his kids and grandkids.

He leaves behind his loved ones: daughter Ouida Salzman, son Robert Brown, loved by Towanda Boone, daughters Tamatha Boone who no longer with us and Tonakia Evans. Sons James Boone, Barkim Boone, Anthony Evans, and 18 grandchildren, as well as his beloved friend and brother Maurice Parker, Jr.

He Wished No One A Last Farewell

He wished no one a last farewell,
nor even said goodbye.
He was gone before we knew it,
And only God knows why.
They say time heals all sorrow,
And helps us to forget,
But time so far only proves
How much we miss him yet,
God gives us strength to face it,
And courage to bear the blow.
But what it meant to
"love" and lose him
No one will ever know.
