

Tyrone Lamont Williams came into this world on March 26, 1980, with Black Love standing with him were his parents, Darlene Williams and Mark Garnes. Tyrone Williams will soon realize he would be born in The Bronx where he finds the love of sports and music all in one borough, his parents by his side. Little Tyrone Williams was a Hollywood Star without being in Hollywood and he was magnetic. Lil' Ty could bring in a crowd of people just with his smile, good looks, charm, and intelligence at a very young age. Being the first born of eight siblings Anthony Williams, Charice Williams, Devin Williams, Saquan Hester, Anthony Naville Storer, Antwine Williams, Malika Williams and Robert Williams being the youngest. Tyrone Williams had some big shoes to fill stepping into this world and he was filling those shoes enormously.

Obituary

As a child Tyrone Williams sparked an interest in baseball, football and basketball, favoring neither and enjoying all as an athlete. Ty's versatility with these three sports was risky, yet he excelled in each. As a result of these three famed sports, three would soon become Ty's lucky number. In the midst of becoming and being an athlete, Ty listened to all genres of music for hours, prepping him for his days: going to school, practice, home, in his cars, everywhere and anywhere. Tyrone has an old soul when it comes to music and loving school his forte. You can ask, "Who loves school?" Tyrone Williams does. He would stay up learning new things, breaking barriers as he discovered pathways to his niche' for computer engineering as well discovering how valuable the dictionary is as a communicator. Tyrone recognized, explored and challenged his brainpower even more when it came to his education, not expecting anything higher than A's. Setting his standards high, Tyrone knew college was forthcoming, so were GPA's of 4.0. Through the years Tyrone Williams built himself to be that awesome, oldest sibling his brothers and sisters could depend on. Indeed, we know Tyrone had a smile that could light up any room, that smile was overwhelming when it came to his family, children, friends and love ones.

Tyrone's first job as a messenger in high school further taught him discipline and hard work. Ty's hard work and dedication to be educated were the keys to his ongoing growth. Tyrone Williams gave 100 percent to both and more. Graduating high school with honors, Long Island University in Brooklyn became his next step for education. Walking into college Tyrone would beat the odds in his family being the first male to step in and set the tone. Never giving up and always pushing through was Tyrone Williams' motto with actions. Having a 4.0 GPA, a social life and knowing how to balance everything out came with ease. Ambition got Tyrone Williams to various points in life, achieving so much. The world would soon be viewed differently when Tyrone Williams' baby girl Amaiya Williams was born. Learning fatherhood firsthand being Ty's greatest feeling and a little girl who looks up to him put the icing on the cake. Not knowing two is better than one, he would welcome his second angelic little girl, Gabrielle Williams. Fatherhood takes him to the ultimate high having an empress and princess on his arms. Tyrone Williams also discovered the love of his life at Long Island University. Tanisha Williams giving him a chance due to his charismatic approach and warmth, he had jokes that kept Tanisha laughing. Example being: While sitting in class one day, Tyrone had his head on the desk as the professor handed out the prior day's test, the Professor asked Tyrone, "What were you doing last night that you are so tired?" Tyrone lifted his head up and looked over at Tanisha Williams and asked, "What time we went to bed last night?" Tanisha responded embarrassingly and blushing, "I do not know what time we went to bed last night. I was up studying all night." Tanisha Williams then realized a different version of Tyrone Williams. Tanisha admired Ty's smartness, confidence, handsomeness and "Oh Boy, Ty was so fine." Falling in love with each other, Tyrone Williams desired to complete his puzzle with having a son, Quadir Williams. Marrying Tanisha Williams would make his family whole. Knowing with no doubt and unconditional love they would give each other a bond that would be unbreakable. Tyrone Williams made sure his family was intact, having his wife pass no judgment, minimized Ty's worries. Tyrone Williams would beat another odd in his family by staying married for 18 years as well to this present moment. It registered to Tyrone Williams that his wife, Tanisha Williams had his back when he had everybody else's backs. Tyrone Williams would see that he didn't have to take on the world by himself, he had his better half every step of the way. Some people dream to have someone love them no matter what, flaws and all, being there without no expectations in return. Tyrone and Tanisha Williams vowed that exclusive love which every woman and man dream of and hope for.

"Live Long, Stay Strong," Tyrone Williams would say that before hanging up a call, he never wanted to say "Good Bye." No matter what Tyrone Williams battled in life being a young black man he still was the force of his family. Pushing his children to strive for greatness and determination for what they started, not to give up and achieve ultimate success. Tyrone Williams was a Momma's Boy, his first love. Loving his mother Darlene SO VERY MUCH, manifested the Love of his Life. Becoming the fun parent and turning into a MARVELOUS and GREAT DAD. Having amazing relationships with his children from birth to eternity he vowed with life.

Tyrone Williams went home to one of the Father's Many Mansions surrounded with love and prayers. Tyrone Williams has his own army with him, behind him, in front of him and the Creator holding him up from beneath and above. Beginning with Grandma Gloria Williams, two uncles Terrell Harris and John Wayne Williams, mother Darlene Williams, father Mark Garnes, his Princess Amaiya Williams, his Angelic Empress Gabrielle Williams and his only Prince, "Number One Guy/Superstar" Quadir Williams, eight siblings and last but not least his extraordinary and awesomely beautiful wife Tanisha Williams as well as a host of many others.

Tyrone Williams' presence and legacy shall be with us forever and on-go through all of us.
